Guía del Módulo: Global minds and Intercultural Competences

Objetivos

Conocer las tendencias globales que hoy en día describen cómo la internacionalización integral aporta a la formación de ciudadanos globalmente competentes.

Concientizar a los participantes sobre la importancia de generar en la comunidad universitaria una mentalidad global e intercultural.

Analizar -como estudio de caso- el Global Mind Monitor de Zuyd University of Applied Sciences, una herramienta tecnológica que monitorea el impacto de la internacionalización en estudiantes y colaboradores.

Perfil del público objetivo:

Directores de Programas/Departamentos/Centros,
Dirección de Relaciones Interinstitucionales y Faculty
Coordinators.

Metodología:

Conferencia y workshop.

El perfil del coacher:

Martine Prins holds a Master degree in African Studies. After graduation she lived and worked in different countries in Europe and Africa, such as Germany and Belgium, Namibia, and Cameroon. She has been involved in research projects, focused on African History and Community Based Natural Resource Management. She has also been active in international development as a technical advisor to several development projects in Africa. At present she is working as a project leader internationalization at Zuyd University and she is in charge of different international projects and programmes that focus on capacity building in higher education in low- and middle resource countries. She is also active in a programme that enables students to do an internship or minor overseas (Africa, Asia, Latin America). One day a week she works for the Research Centre International Relationship Management where she focuses on intercultural competence development and supports the further development and promotion of the Global Mind Monitor, a tool that measures and helps to reflect on the development of intercultural competences.
